

Invitation to the workshop: How to fight authoritarianism?

Saturday, February 21, 10 a.m. – 3 p.m., workshop room of „Erogene Zone“ on the Grethergelände (Adlerstr. 12)

For more than a year, a very broad-based protest movement in Serbia has been fighting the authoritarian Vučić regime. It is astonishing to see the perseverance with which the protesters are maintaining political pressure. We have invited three activists from Belgrade to discuss the tactics and strategies of the Serbian protest movement with us. It is obvious that we can learn a lot from the Serbs when we see how quickly the enormous energy for mobilization has fizzled out here, for example after the AfD's so-called “remigration” meeting.

We will take time for this on Saturday, February 21. We want to discuss in a small group (maximum 30 people) with Raša Nedeljkov, Nikolina Sinđelić, and Stevan Filipović where our struggle against the authoritarian formation of society overlaps with that in Serbia and what we can learn from the learning processes in Serbia that we can also apply here. We have the workshop room on the Grethergelände available from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. We are planning two two-hour discussions with an hour's lunch break in between. And we would like you to join us: people who are active in civil society organizations and who oppose the new authoritarianism – and who believe that they can learn something from the discussion with our guests and among themselves.

Please note: For practical reasons, the discussion will be held in English. There will be no translation.

Accessibility information: <https://erogene-zone.org/Barrierefreiheit>

Please register informally at info@archivsozialebewegungen.de – places are limited.

Michael Koltan (Social Movements Archive) and Dejan Mihajlović